Macroeconomic highlights

Global Macroeconomic highlights

On October 14, the IMF forecasted the global economy to grow by 3.2% (2025), an upward from the 3% projected in July and 3.1% (2026), due to a spending surge before high tariffs take effect and a weaker USD supporting global trade.

Following direct talks on October 30, the US agreed to reduce tariffs on Chinese goods to 47%, in return for Beijing resuming purchases of US soybeans, maintaining rare earth exports, and increasing restriction on illegal fentanyl trafficking.

On October 29, the FED announced an additional 0.25% interest rate cut - the second consecutive cut in 2025, responding to rising risks in the labor market. The possibility of a FED rate cut in December 2025 is currently low due to caution inflation risks.

EU

- The EU will downscale its 2026 growth forecast as the assessment of an economic outlook after the 1-year of the re-election of President Trump
- On November 13, the European Parliament (EP) approved the EU's 2040 target to cut greenhouse gas emissions by 90% compared to 1990 levels, moving towards carbon neutrality.

The U.S.

On November 12, President Trump signed the spending bill, allowing the government to reopen after the longest shutdown in history, lasting 43 days. Thousands of employees have returned to work, and aviation operations are gradually returning to normal.

China

China's economy continued serious downturn in October as exports fell 1.1% YoY - the first drop since March 2024. Industrial production rose 4.5% YoY - the lowest increase since the beginning of the year and below the average forecast of 5.5%.

Vietnam Macroeconomic highlights

On November 10, UOB revised up Vietnam 2025 GDP growth forecast from 7.5% to 7.7%. The driving force comes from the 9-month growth results, with a strong recovery in exports and industrial production, despite new tariffs from the US.

As of Nov 11, the free market VND/USD rate was 27,650VND - 1,200 VND above the official bank rate. This rate is up 6.96% year-to-date and has not cooled down, driven by USD hoarding amid high gold prices and low savings rates

At the 5th round of negotiations for the Bilateral Trade Agreement of Vietnam and the U.S. from November 12-14, 2025, Two countries has achieved significant progress on many issues such as services, digital trade, agriculture, technical barriers to trade (TBT), and sanitary and phytosanitary (SPS) standards... narrowing the gap on remaining issues.
